- An original idea for a story, coincidentally related to the current situation (pandemic); in the book, Screwy wants to cure his father who fell ill with the virus and was locked in workshop
- The theme of machines and devices is popular among children
- A romantic sub-plot – Screwy's love for Copper
- Atmospheric illustrations by Grażyna Rigall

It was no longer safe in Machinesville, the angry wail of police sirens could be heard more and more often, and botcops in pursuit of robots breaching the peace had almost become a everyday event. All because of a virus for which an effective cure had yet to be found. The authorities try to cover up the problem and promptly remove any infected unit. Machines showing symptoms of the disease are sent to Workshop, a forbidden place from which no one had yet returned. Screwy's father is also among the infected. The young robot wants to save him at all costs. Can he find a way? Does he stand a chance? The mission seems impossible...
